

MAKING CH. HISTORY AT UNITED CHURCH SUNDAY AND MONDAY

In a church which was decorated more prettily perhaps than any seen in town before, the inaugural services of the new United Church of Canada were held on Sunday last in the former Grace church. The ladies responsible for the adornment of the sacred edifice are sure worthy of all praise.

The event was truly an epoch marking one in the religious life of our fair Dominion, and the service at both morning and evening gatherings, which were conducted by the pastor, Rev G. Pybus, was of an inspirational and uniting character.

The scripture readings and the sermons were all of a most appropriate nature to the occasion, and were listened to with rapt attention by large congregations. Indeed at the evening service the building was not nearly large enough to hold those wishing to enter, and after filling the aisle and a number standing all through the service, many had to perform to draw their automobiles as close as possible to the open windows and thus participate in the solemn occasion.

Special music had been prepared for the day, and a large augmented choir, led by Mrs W. Clark, with Mrs J. Telford at the organ, rendered special anthems at both morning and evening services in a highly creditable manner. In addition to these numbers solo parts in the several anthems were taken by Mrs W. Huntingford, Mrs Steel, Mrs Gerow, Mr F. Morris and Mr G. Long.

The congregational singing of the hymns was of such heartiness and fervor as is seldom heard, all seeming to catch the spirit of the inauguration of a new body founded in Christ for the furtherance of His cause upon earth. The violin obligato played by Mrs E. Ganderton for Mrs Clark's solo was a very pleasing innovation too.

During each of these services the membership rolls of the former Grace church with its tributary appointments at Greenfields and Trafalgar, as well as the roll of names of those who have entered into union from the former St. Andrew's Presbyterian church in town were read aloud to the congregation. Mr E. Frickleton reading the former list and Mr J. McLeod giving the list of the latter names. There is an amount of no less than 111 members for the new church to start out with and should prove a very tower of strength to the new Dominion-wide denomination in this territory.

At the morning service, the pastor preached an eloquent sermon from "The new commandment" (John 13:34) "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another," and pointed out that it was only by the following of such an injunction as the Saviour left to his disciples that the work of the new church could hope to fulfill His commandments and share in the great benefits both spiritual and temporal which would come from such a mutual love and understanding; such a spirit of forbearance as the Saviour exhibited; such a striving to live in peace and love with all men, as was exhorted in these words of our Lord.

The sermon subject of the evening gathering was "The Chief Cornerstone" and the pastor profoundly discredited from the text—"Built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the Chief Cornerstone" (Eph. ii, 20). In his address, the speaker clearly showed that it was only by men being turned abruptly to the fact that their lives must be built upon a sure foundation of religious principles that such success was attainable and the grand life hereafter assured; and exhorted his hearers to build together for a habitation of God through the spirit of Jesus Christ.

"Bring God into everyday life," said the preacher, "and by so doing build a foundation for the heritage which each of us so much desired to attain in the after life. Only by the strict adherence to the mysterious plans of the great God of the universe could mankind hope for salvation from sin, and the greatest factor of all was to build with Christ as the Chief Cornerstone."

A very interesting feature of the evening gathering was the fact that the program for the day had been prepared by the convenience of those in attendance, and the thought of those responsible for this was an added comfort, containing as it did the whole summary of the proceedings as well as the words of the different hymns sung by all. This will without doubt in many cases be carefully kept as a fitting souvenir of the auspicious occasion, as will also the copy of "The New Outlook" the new publication of the United Church of Canada, a copy of which was also presented free to the head of each family.

Altogether the day was one of the red-letter days of religious exercises in Wainwright, as indeed it must have been where such services were held, and it surely augurs well for the new body that so great interest was taken in the proceedings by so large a number of worshippers. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the close of the evening service, some 86 communicants being attendant at this gathering.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL MEET OF NEW BODY

On the Monday evening following the first gathering of the new congregation was held in the church building, and although not as largely attended as the Sunday services, there was a nice attendance and the interest taken in the proceedings proved that all the members had set out to enter heartily upon any necessary duties which might devolve upon them, and that all individual numbers were also on the programme for the day, these being "Into Thy hands" (Wolsey) by Mrs J. Gerow in the morning, and "Hear us O Father" (Santago) by Mrs W. Clark and "Grateful, O Lord, am I" (Caro Roma) by Mr W. Huntingford at the evening gathering.

In addition to these numbers solo parts in the several anthems were taken by Mrs W. Huntingford, Mrs Steel, Mrs Gerow, Mr F. Morris and Mr G. Long.

BALL BOYS TAKE EASY WIN FROM VERMILION TEAM

In a friendly game played on Friday last, the Wainwright team came within seven points of winning the game—only Wainwright got the seven first!

The play was of an erratic nature, and errors numerous by the visitors. Lee, the home pitcher, sure had the measure of the Vermilion boys, and struck out no fewer than fifteen men, being ably assisted in his work by Johnson with the big hit.

The summary of the game was as follows:—

Wainwright 0 3 0 3 0 0 1 1 7 7
Batteries—Robertson and Ivy for Vermilion; Lee and Johnston for Wainwright.

Umpire—Hanway. Time, 1h. 35m.

In the game which the Chautauvins pulled off with our boys on Wednesday last the visitors just scored the only run of the game through an error on the part of the locals. The boys played air-tight ball in this game, and are now shaping good for a real happy season's amusement for the fans. Give them your support, and get out and root at the games. The fresh air will do you good!

POOL MEETING HELD IN IRMA WITH GOOD SPEAKERS

On Saturday last a meeting was held in Irma to consider and organize for the three new pools now being formed in the province.

W. F. Stevens, former livestock commissioner for Alberta and now a director, and secretary of the livestock pool spoke on the aims and objects of the livestock pool. Mr Stevens who through years of experience has a thorough knowledge of the livestock business discussed in a very clear and simple manner the main provisions in the contract, and the various ways in which the pool had made provisions to take care of the farmer's interests. He showed the disastrous and bad effect of dumping on the market and how this might be avoided through co-operative marketing as planned by the pool. Incidents were quoted to show how speculators had made fortunes at the expense of the stock grower; when hogs were selling in Alberta at eight cents and heavy sows were docked four cents and certain speculators bought these sows up by the carload at a fifty percent dockage in Alberta and sold them at a huge profit on Chicago markets, where there was a keen demand for this type of hog and where the only dockage was ten percent in weight.

Mrs F. E. Wyman director and secretary of the poultry pool spoke after Mr Stevens and gave an excellent outline of the plans of the poultry pool. Mrs Wyman made a special appeal to the women to boost the poultry pool. It is the women who care for the little chicks and turkeys and gather the eggs and it is up to them to see that they get for eggs and poultry when they are sold is worth all the effort and care and trouble raising them. The women of the province are taking a very keen interest in this pool and with the assistance of the government who are ready to turn over to the pool the storage and marketing facilities they now have there is no reason why the poultry pool can not make it worth for women to raise more and better poultry.

J. R. Love director of the dairy pool also spoke briefly on this pool. Mr Love contended that we only get paid according to the interest we take in the marketing of our products and the people in the Irma district have been more satisfied apparently with cream prices than the people in the Hardisty-Hughenden and Melisick districts where he had been holding meetings. Those who want to have something to say about the price of butter-fat should sign-up at once. Co-operative marketing has been tested in Denmark for seventy-five years and to-day there is less poverty in Denmark than any other country in the world. The success of the different pools depends entirely on the number of farmers who sign-up, and those who have not yet done so are asked to do so at once as the campaign ends on the 28th of June. Meetings still to be held are published in this paper.

Messrs J. Mackenzie and H. Pawling were in attendance at the Liberal convention at Manville last week.

WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES

The Wainwright Dramatic Club put on the celebrated farce comedy "What Happened to Jones" in the Elite theatre on the evening of THURSDAY, JUNE 25th.

This is the last play of the season; so if you want a laugh that will last all summer, BE THERE!

On Thursday evening last, the Grace church was nicely filled with parents and friends of the pupils of Mrs G. Pybus, on the occasion of the semi-annual piano recital of these budding artists.

The ages of the pupils—from mere tots to those of mature years—showed plainly the wide of the work covered in the tutelage, and all the performers reflected great credit upon the splendid tuition which must have been given to attain the results listened to at the recital.

A greater number of the numbers given were of the classic variety, and all the most difficult passages in these were handled with a skill and technique in some cases remarkable; this being specially noticeable from the older pupils.

During the evening Mrs W. Clark sang a couple of vocal numbers in her usual splendid style, and each number on the programme received unstinted applause.

The following was the full programme:—

These animals comprised some nice looking stock of one and two year old specimens, and quite a number of them were full of life—especially when the park riders were trying to persuade them that the inside of a C.N.R. cattle car was as nice as the open prairie!

However, they were all loaded in safety and without accident and it is hoped to land them at Waterways in the same condition. There will be some six men going along in charge of the cars and attend the animals en route, and Walter Terpening, who left with the outfit will end, erikale to load the animals at Waterways on the acres which will carry them for their final distribution in the wooded country in the upper reaches of the Peace river.

Meanwhile branding of more of them goes on, and each Monday it is expected to make such a shipment as was that of this week, until the total have been forwarded north to relieve the pressure of overbreeding by the big brutes in the local park.

Several visitors from Edmonton and Calgary were present at the loading as well as quite a crowd of towns-people and in some respects the scene recalled to some extent the unloading scenes here when the original 7000 buffaloes arrived from the States to start the herd now existing.

At last, our town policeman is clothed in a manner fully befitting the dignity and weight of the office; and there is no doubt that the law will be enforced just a little easier from the fact that folks can see that "that's the cop!"

Mrs Brunker left on Saturday for a visit to her sister at Camrose.

Mr A. Lasell who has been on a visit to her son at Chauvin has now returned home.

Inspector Smith was in town last week on his periodical visit to the high school.

Mr and Mrs E. Williams are in town on a visit to Mrs Williams' parents, Mr and Mrs A. Love.

Mrs Glen Johnson, who has been visiting her parents in Washington returned home last week.

Mr Tom Dolan went to Cold Lake last week to plan the building of a tourist camp for Mr Felix.

Mr A. Malmberg, of Heath, who has been in California for the past year is visiting friends here.

The committee has three suggestions before it at present. The first is to continue the use of the Red Ensign with the Canadian arms as Canada's national flag. The second is to use the Union Jack with the Canadian arms in the center. The third is to adopt an entirely new design.

Falling in line with Australia and New Zealand, Canada is to have a new flag, which will be recognized as the flag of the Dominion. The government has passed an order-in-council appointing a committee to consider and report on the most suitable design for a Canadian National flag for use ashore.

A distinctive Canadian flag has so far been authorized for use only by Canadian government owned vessels and by other vessels of Canadian registry. In the former case the flag is the Blue Ensign, with the Canadian arms in the fly, while merchant vessels of Canadian registry who fly the Red Ensign with the Canadian arms in the fly.

FASCINATING DRAMA OF NEW YORK HAS DELIGHTFUL QUALITIES

No screen production that has yet been produced possesses such delightful qualities as does "Romance" the alluring and fascinating love story from the pen of Edward Sheldon, America's foremost dramatist, in which Miss Doris Keane, who played the leading role on the stage for six continuous years in New York Chicago, Boston and London, will play the chief part when it is shown at the theatre Friday and Saturday.

This fascinating drama of New York reveals Mr Sheldon as a playwright of rare sentiment and poetic gift as well as a brilliant technician, and is a most gratifying fulfilment of the promise of all of his former wonderful works.

As Mme. Cavallini, the fascinating prima donna heroine, Miss Keane has won for herself many triumphs on the international stage and is ranked today as America's greatest emotional actress of the present day. Her impersonation of the difficult role is one of the most brilliant acting achievements the screen has known.

The production is remarkable in its every detail, and is beyond comparison in artistry of detail with any motion picture production of the last decade. The most minute care has been taken to faithfully represent the environment of New York in which the production is laid, and the picture will go down in motion picture history as one of the epoch-making productions of the age.

Western Consol Well Has Nasty Fishing Job Now

Work of drilling down to the known oil sands at the site of the Western Consolidated company received a set back for a few days last week when pulling a string of casing the big ten-inch pipe parted in the middle of a length leaving quite a large amount of the string still at the bottom of the hole.

It would seem that although this is a very unusual occurrence, the same thing has happened to other wells, and no doubt with such an experienced driller as Dave Credille to charge the derrick well is over-coming "some manna."

The well is now down over 1500 feet, with good indications being shown and the meeting of company officials last week when among the directors of the company present were Messrs A. Palmer, R. Spencer, G. Robinson, E. Guthrie, Godfrey Morris and Dr. Tatham, had a truly optimistic note.

At the new well of the British Petroleum company—B.M. T. Sugar—who was in town for a few days says that record drilling time is being made. No casing is being taken at this well as the hole is so close to the old number three hole that the struts being passed through prove to be the same in both drillings. The great desire of the double crews at work is to reach the 40-foot producing sand, as in the original No. 3 well, and as soon as these are reached the casing is to be set and the best possible effort made to bring in a producer. This should be a truly magnificent well if the indications of oil already known at the depth are any criterion. This last casing at the 2240-foot depth will be 8 1/2-inch steel, as this will provide means for the most efficient test ever given a well in this field.

The No. 2 well of this company is still giving a flow of about 3,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day in addition to some ten barrels of heavy oil, and these products are being used for the purposes at the other sites while the No. 4 well is being prepared for pumping, to prove the quantity available from this hole. If it is found necessary or shown to be advisable, it is the intention to continue on down with this hole to a lower depth.

The crew at the interior well is now working again under Fred Beresford, a truly plentiful supply of water having been secured in the new well recently drilled at the site, and they are now under-reaming and putting in casing as fast as the big bit pounds its way down to the oil sands. It is expected by the superintendent that there is a great possibility that this hole will prove to be the wonder hole of the district on account of its splendid location from a geological standpoint, and the officials of the company all feel that his faith will be justified.

MUST CURB ARMY IDEA AS GERMANY COULD BECOME NATION IN ARMS

Thirteen specified defaults in the military provisions of the treaty of Versailles are charged against Germany in the allied note demanding rectification of these violations before the Cologne area is evacuated.

The allied note prepared by the Council of Ambassadors was made public here Friday. It is designed to be conciliatory, but it is likely to arouse a storm in Germany. The allies declare that the report of the inter-allied control commission revealed numerous defaults which "if not promptly rectified, would enable Germany to reconstitute an army along the lines of a nation in arms."

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN

James Oliver Curwood

A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

"BAREE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, With Wolf, the Wan Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story.

Copyright, by Dow Ledy, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Baree the wolf-dog, searching frantically for his mistress, Nepee, followed the trap-line she and her father used to traverse. There were plenty of rabbits in the traps and he did not go hungry but he found no trace of the girl. He was a changed Baree. He was more than ever like a wolf, yet he never gave the wolf-howl now, and always he snarled deep in his throat when he heard the cry of the pack.

Again, in the heart of a fierce February storm, he pursued a bull caribou so closely that it plunged over a cliff and broke its neck. He lived well and in size and strength he was growing swiftly into a giant of his kind. In another six months he would be as large as Kazan, and his jaws were almost as powerful, even now.

The winter passed, and spring came and still Baree continued to hunt his old trails, ever going now and then over the old trapline as far as the first of the two cabins. The traps were reset and sprung now; the thawing snow disclosed bones and feathers between their jaws; under the deadfalls were remnants of fur, and out on the ice of the lakes were picked skeletons of foxes and wolves that had taken the poisonbait. The last snow went. The swollen streams sang in the forests and canyons. The grass turned green and the first flowers came.

Surely, this was the time for Nepee to come home! He watched for her expectantly. He went still more frequently to their swimming-pool in the forest and he hung closely to the burned cabin and the dog-corral. Twice he sprang into the pool and whined as he swam about, as though she surely must join him in their old water hole. And now as the spring passed and summer came, there settled upon him slowly the gloom and misery of utter hopelessness. The flowers were all out now and even the barest vines glowed like red fire in the woods. Patches of green were beginning to hide the charred heap where the cabin had stood.

CHAPTER XXIV

It was early in August when Baree left the Gray Loon. He had no objective in view. But there was still left upon his mind, like the delicate impression of light and shadow on a negative the memories of his earlier days. Things and happenings that he had almost forgotten recurred to him now as his trail led him farther and farther away from the Gray Loon; and his earlier experiences became real again, pictures thrown out afresh in his mind by the breaking of the last ties that held him to the home of the Willow. Involuntarily he followed the trail of these impressions—of these past happenings, and slowly they helped to build up new interests for him. A year in his life was a long time—a decade of man's experience. It was more than a year ago that he had left Kazan and Gray Wolf and the old windfall, and yet now there came back to him distinct memories of those days of his earliest puppyhood, of the stream into which he had fallen, and of his fierce battle with Papayichisew. It was his earlier experiences that roused the older memories. He came to the blind canyon upon which Nepee and Pierrot had chased him. That seemed but yesterday.

And now, for the first time in many weeks, a bit of the old-time eagerness sped into Baree's feet. Memories that had been hazy and indistinct through forgetfulness were becoming realities again and as he would have returned to the Gray Loon had Nepee been there so now, with something of the feeling of a wanderer going home he returned to the old beaver-pond.

It was that most glorious hour of summer's day—sunset—when he reached it. He stopped—a hundred yards away, with the pond still hidden from his sight, and sniffed the air and listened. The pond was there. He caught the cool honey smell of it. But Unisk, and Beaver-tooth and all the others. Would he find them? He strained his ears to catch a familiar sound, and after a moment or two it came—a hollow splash in the water. He went quickly through the alders and stood at last close to the spot where he had first made the acquaintance of Unisk. The surface of the pond was undulating slightly; two or three heads popped up; he saw the torpedo-like wake of an old beaver towing a stick close to the opposite shore—he looked toward the dam, and it was as he had left it almost a year ago. He did not show himself for a time but stood concealed in the young alders. He felt growing in him more and more a feeling of restfulness, a relaxation from the long strain of the lonely months during which he had waited for Nepee. With a long breath he lay down among the alders with his head just enough exposed to give him a clear view. As the sun settled lower the pond became alive. Out on the shore where he had saved Unisk from the fox came another generation of young beavers—three of them, fat and waddling. Very softly Baree whined.

All that night he lay in the alders. The beaver-pond became his home again. Conditions were changed, of course and as days grew into weeks the inhabitants of Beaver-tooth's colony showed no signs of accepting the crown up Baree as they had accepted the baby Baree of long ago. He was big, black and wolfish now—a long-fanged and formidable looking creature and though he offered no violence he was regarded by the beavers with a deep-seated feeling of fear and suspicion. On the other hand, Baree no longer left the old puppyish desire to play with the baby beavers, so their aloofness did not trouble him as in those other days.

All through the month of August Baree made the beaver-pond his headquarters. At times his excursions kept him away for two or three days at a time. These journeys were always into the north sometimes a little east and sometimes a little west but never again into the south. And at last, early in September he left the beaver pond for good.

For many days his wanderings carried him in on one particular direction. He followed the hunting, living chiefly in rabbits and that simple-minded species of partridge known as the "fool hen." This diet, of course was given variety by other things as they happened to come his way. Wild currants and raspberries were ripening, and Baree was fond of these. He also liked the bitter berries of the mountain ash which along with the soft balsam ash spruce which he licked with his tongue now and then, were good medicine for him. In shallow water he occasionally caught a fish; and then he hazarded a cautious battle with a porcupine, and if he was successful he feasted on the tenderest and most delicious of all the forest's gifts—the young deer. The big "blubbers" that he occasionally caught to no longer held terrors for him; in the midst of plenty he forgot the days in which he had gone hungry. In October he wandered as far west as the Gekie River, and then northward to Wollaston Lake. There was a good hundred miles north of the Gray Loon. The first week in October he turned south again following the Canoe River for a distance and then swinging westward along a twisting creek called the little Black Bear With No Tail. More than once during these weeks Baree came into touch with man, but, with the exception of the Cree hunter at the upper end of Wollaston Lake no man had seen him. Three times in following the Gekie he lay crouched in the bush while canoes passed; half a dozen times, in the stillness of night, he nosed about cabins and tepees in which there was life, and once he came so near to the Hudson's Bay Company post at Wollaston that he could hear the barking of dogs and the shouting of their master. And always he was seeking—questing for the thing that had gone out of his life.

At the thresholds of the cabins he sniffed; outside of the tepees he circled close, gathering the wind; the canoes he watched with eyes in which there was a hopeful gleam. Once he thought the wind brought him the scent of Nepee, and all at once his legs grew weak under his body and his heart seemed to stop beating. It was only for a moment or two. She came out of the tepee—an Indian girl with her hands full of will-work—and Baree slunk away unseen.

It was almost December when Lerue, a halfbreed from Lac Bain, saw Baree's footprints in freshly fallen snow, and a little later caught a flash of him in the bush.

"Mon Dieu, I tell you his feet are as big as my hand, an he is as black as a raven's wing with the sun on it," he exclaimed in the Company's store at Lac Bain. "A fox? Non! He is half as big as a bear. A wolf—oui! And black as the veil, M'sieur."

McTaggart was one of those who heard. He was putting his signature in ink to a letter he had written to the Company when Lerue's came to him. His hand stopped so suddenly that a drop of ink splattered on the letter. Through him ran a curious shiver as looked over at the halfbreed. Just then Marie came in. McTaggart had brought her back from her tribe. Her big, dark eyes had a sick look in them and some of her wild beauty had gone since a year ago.

"He was like—that!" Lerue was saying, with a snap of his fingers. He saw Marie and stopped.

"Black, you say?" McTaggart said carefully without lifting his eyes from his work. "Did he not bear some dog mark?"

Lerue shrugged his shoulders. "He was gone like the wind, M'sieur. But he was a wolf."

With scarcely a sound that the others could hear Marie had whispered in to the Factor's ear, and folding his left hand on his hip, he rose quickly and left the store. He was gone an hour. Lerue and the others were puzzled. It was not often that Marie came into the store; it was not often that they saw her at all. She remained hidden in the Factor's log house, and each time that he saw her Lerue thought that her face was a little thinner than the last and her eyes bigger and hungrier looking. In his own heart there was a yearning. Many a night he passed the little window beyond which he knew that she was sleeping; often he looked to catch a glimpse of her pale face and he lived in the one happiness of knowing that Marie understood, and that into her eyes there came for an instant a different light when there glances met. No one else knew. The secret lay between them—and patiently Lerue waited and watched. "Someday," he kept saying to himself—"Someday"—and that was all. The one word carried a world of meaning and of hope. When that day came he would take Marie straight to the Missioner at Fort Churchill, and they would be married. It was a dream that made the long days and the longer nights on the trap-line patiently endured. Now they were both slaves to the envying Power. But—someday—

CHAPTER XXV

The trap-line of Pierre Eustach ran thirty miles straight west of Lac Bain. It was not as long as Pierre's old line had been, but it was like a main artery running through the heart of a rich fur country. It had belonged to Pierre Eustach's father, and his grandfather, and his grandfather, and his grandfather, and beyond that it reached, Pierre averred, back to the very pulse of the finest blood in France. The books at McTaggart's post went back only as far as a week after it scarcely a hoof or claw older evidence of ownership being at Churchill. It was the finest game country between Reindeer Lake and the Barren Lands. It was in December that Baree came to it.

Again he was travelling southward in a slow and wandering fashion, seeking food in the deep snows. The Kittiwake, or Great Storm, had come earlier than usual this winter, and for a week after it scarcely a hoof or claw was moving. Baree, unlike the other creatures, did not bury himself in the snow and wait for the skies to clear and crust to form. He was big, and powerful, and restless. Less than two years old, he weighed a good eighty pounds. His pads were broad and wolfish. His chest and shoulders were like a Malenute's heavy and yet muscled for speed. He was wider between the eyes than the wolfbreed, and his eyes were larger, and entirely clear of the Wuttoo, or blood-film, that marks the wolf and also to an extent the husky. His jaws were like Kazan's, perhaps even more powerful. Through all that week of the Big Storm he travelled without food. There were four days of snow, with driving blizzards and fierce winds, and after that three days of intense cold in which every living creature kept to its warm dug-out in the snow. Even the birds had burrowed themselves in. One might have walked on the blacks of caribou and moose and not have guessed it. Baree sheltered himself during the worst of the storm but did not allow the snow to gather over him.

Every trapper from Hudson's Bay to the country of the Athabasca knew that after the Big Storm the famished fur animals would be seeking food, and that traps and deadfalls properly set and baited stood the biggest chance f the year of being filled. Some of them set out over their trap-lines on the sixth day; some on the seventh and others on the eighth. It was on the seventh day that Bush McTaggart started over Pierre Eustach's line which was now his own for the season. It took him two days to uncover the traps, dig the snow from them, rebuild the fallen "trap-houses" and rearrange the baits. On the third day he was back at Lac Bain.

It was on this day that Baree came to the cabin at the far end of McTaggart's line. McTaggart's trail was fresh in the snow about the cabin, and the instant Baree sniffed of it every drop of blood in his body seemed to leap suddenly with a strange excitement. It took perhaps half a minute for the scent that filled his nostrils to associate itself with what had gone before, and at the end of that halfminute there tumbled in Baree's chest a deep and sudden grief. For many minutes after that he stood like a black rock in the snow, watching the cabin. There slowly he began circling about it, drawing nearer and nearer until at last he was sniffing at the threshold. No sound or smell of life came from inside, but he could smell the old smell of McTaggart. Then he faced the wilderness—the direction in which the trap line ran back to Lac Bain. He was trembling. His muscles whined. Pictures were assembling more and more vividly in his mind—the cabin, Nepee, the wild chase edge—even the memory of that age-old struggle when McTaggart had caught him in the rabbit snare. In his white there was a great yearning, almost expectation.

Slowly he followed the trail and a quarter of a mile from the cabin struck the first trap on the line. Hunger had caved in his sides until he was like a starved wolf. In the first trap-house McTaggart had placed a bait the hind quarter of a snowshoe rabbit. Baree reached incautiously. He had learned many things on Pierre's line; he had learned what the snap of a trap meant; he had felt the cruel pain of steel jaws; he knew better than the shrewdest fox what a deadfall would do when the trigger was sprung—and Nepee herself had taught him that he was never to touch a poison-bait. So he closed his teeth gently in the rabbit flesh and drew it forth as cleverly as McTaggart himself could have done.

How Teachers Federation Will Tour Canada

(1) One of the Great Lakes steamers which will convey the party from Port William to Port McNicoll.
(2) The ferry boat "Motor Princess" plying between Vancouver and Vancouver Island.
(3) The Special Train which makes a record run across the entire country.

Robert Louis Stevenson crossed the Pyrenees on a donkey. He was enjoying the trip. Whatever physical discomforts he had to put up with were more than compensated for by the amount of knowledge he accumulated, and by the deep pleasure he derived from coming into close contact with the beauties and wonders of nature. But the donkey, whatever his good points may be, is not now regarded as the most satisfactory means of transportation and we in Canada have a decided preference for the more comfortable and rapid conveyances depicted above.

The picture illustrates the general system by which the various points of the Dominion have become linked up with one another by Canadian Pacific steamers, trains and automobiles. It also shows the means by which Dean Laird's special party of school-teachers will make their educational trip across Canada, from coast to coast, leaving Toronto on July 20th, arriving at Vancouver July 27th, and returning to Toronto early in August. A special train (No. 3 in the illustration) will be utilized, and reduced rates are being offered to teachers who desire, as it were, to complete their own education.

(4) An open observation car used on all trains passing through the Rocky Mountains.
(5) A lake steamer steamer.
(6) An automobile awaiting to take passengers over the famous Banff-Windermere Highway.
(7) Sight-seeing bus used at various interesting points of the trip.

tion by increasing their personal acquaintanceship with the country about which it is their duty to instruct the rising generation. Although the tour is arranged primarily for the benefit of school teachers, it is not restricted to them, and other professional and business people are taking advantage of the opportunity to make this combined pleasure and educational trip across the country.

The party will travel by rail, with several stop-overs, at Vancouver, and from there will cross to Vancouver Island by a Canadian Pacific ferry boat (No. 2). From there by train they will proceed from Vancouver to Nelson, B.C., and thence via steamer (No. 5) over Lake Kootenay to Kootenay Landing. By rail again to Windermere, from where the automobiles (No. 6) will convey them over the famous Banff-Windermere Highway to Banff. Entraining once more, the party will go on to Edmonton, returning from there to Fort William, from which point they travel by one of the Canadian Pacific Great Lakes Steamers to Port McNicoll (No. 1) and complete the tour from there to Toronto by rail.

MAKING A GOOD TOWN
SOME BETTER STILL

While the administration is talking about economy and the reduction of taxation by cutting national expenditures, it is well to watch the other end of economic leaks—the curtailment of unnecessary waste on the part of the people themselves. Should not economy begin at the bottom as well as at the top?

Recently a "Better Mailing Week" was inaugurated to conduct a nationwide campaign to "reduce the appalling loss through carelessness in addressing and wrapping mail matter." It was pointed out that 21,000,000 letters and 803,000 parcels went to the dead letter office last year! It costs the neat sum of $1,740,000 a year just to look up addresses on misdirected mail.

There is little consolation in the theory that the postal system "pays for itself." It does not even do this every loss through carelessness on the part of the public not only reflects itself in increase of postal rates, but saps from the national treasury to make up the deficiency. Upwards of $2,000,000 must be added to the annual running expenses of the Post Office Department because you and I are either careless or innocently negligent.

When we begin to regard the postal system as something more than a machine, and our local postal employees as something more than "superior beings and mind readers, we will begin to wrap and address our mail more carefully and thus cut out a needless loss from our national expenditures. Economy by thoughtfulness is equally important with economy by curtailment. As was pointed out by Postmaster General New, a man always knows his own address whether he knows his correspondent's or not and can at least identify his letter or package in the upper left-hand corner. It is not far-fetched to bring these points to bear in helping to make a good community better. Whatever helps the nation as a whole helps every community in it. Whatever is saved for a department of your government is saved for you, because the saving reflects itself in lessened taxation as less need for revenue; and the post office is closer to the people than any other branch of administrative government.

Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and

We're not so much worried over the danger of teaching evolution in the schools, but we do wish people would quit continually telling little boys they are bad.

MASONRY AND HUMAN CONDUCT

Masonic faith and principles and their relation to the well-being of man kind formed the subject of an address by Judge Morrison, at a complimentary banquet tendered visiting Masons from all over the province at the Mac Donald hotel, The judge declared that the problems of Masonry were concerned chiefly with human conduct and human principles in an effort to further the interests of society and the state. Symbolism and ritualism, he said, served a useful purpose, replacing the materialism of pagan days.

EXPENDITURES ARE CUT

Much of the remainder of the week in the House has been devoted to consideration of Estimates of the various Departments, those Estimates without exception disclosing an earnest desire on the part of the Government to cut expenditures down to the bare necessities. What criticism is being made by the Opposition has been confined to some small and personal issues, after their inability to discover any evidence of the much talked of extravagance with which they have accused this Government. For instance, in the Estimates of the Department of Finance they have asked for a time to be set apart for a discussion of the new Auditor General, George Conthier, whose activities since he came into office have shown a desire to faithfully discharge his duties.

Flower Scents Impair Voice,
Singing Expert Declares

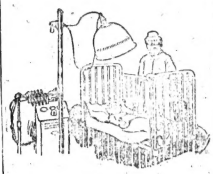

According to a European authority, the mere act of smelling strongly scented flowers temporarily impairs the voice, while if indulged in unchecked, it may prove disastrous if the singer is attempting high notes before an audience. Violets, roses, the lily-of-the-valley, the narcissus and the white lilac are said to be especially harmful in that they prevent clearness of vocal sounds. Violets, if freshly cut, vary in effect according to different individuals. In some cases, they cause an almost total loss of voice, while in others, they create a peculiar hoarseness and dryness in the throat. Rose scents act similarly, although the white and yellow varieties usually impair the voice less than the red-bloom scents, it is reported.

X-Rays for Treating
Whooping Cough

There are over 6,000 deaths in this country every year from whooping cough, and medical authorities rail this disease as one of the highest in the infant-mortality statistics of the country. These figures are necessarily incomplete, for many communities do not class it as a reportable disease, and therefore keep no records of it.

However, an effective method of treatment, which in a large majority of cases, removes a cure, and in practically every case effects great improvement, as well as arresting the progress of the disease, has been found. It is believed, in the last two years, 700 cases of whooping cough have been treated by means of the X-ray or Roentgen ray, at the "On-Site" department of the Boston Boston hospital, with only two deaths, these being of babies under one year old, where the disease was complicated with pneumonia. So successful has this X-ray treatment proved at this hospital, where it was first used, that it has now been taken up by institutions in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Montreal.

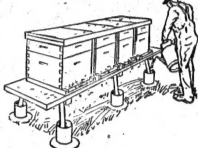

The apparatus used consists of an ordinary high-tension transformer, with a rectifying device, a universal Coddard tube and a treatment stand, with cones of such size and shape as would include the entire chest of the patient at a distance of twenty-eight inches. The patient reclines on a couch during the treatment.

Direction of Aerial Has Effect

All aeriels are somewhat directional in effect, although the loop is popularly supposed to be the only antenna that has this property. If the radio fan will bear this fact in mind when erecting his aerial he may increase the efficiency of the set. For example, if the majority of the broadcasting stations he expects to receive are to the north of his location, and he is erecting a single-wire antenna, the aerial should point north and south, and the lead-in wire should be taken off the north end, that is, the end nearest the stations.

Protecting Bees from Ants

Every season thousands of farmers and bee raisers throughout the country find that ants and other crawling insects enter the beehives and inflict considerable injury on the swarms, sometimes destroying them entirely. Many methods of guarding against these enemies have been tried with more or less success, but an effective barrier is provided against ant invasions by placing the hives on tables and setting the legs in small pails filled with water. Obviously the ants cannot get at the hives as they would have to cross the water to do so. It has been found advisable to mount three or four hives on one table, which is made of 2-in. planks held together with cleats. Holes, about 2-in. in diameter, are drilled in the ends of the cleats and the legs driven into these. The legs are set in small pails and the pails are filled with water. This method of protection has been tried and found entirely satisfactory.

traffic. Tests for color-blindness, range of sight and other important features of the eyes are applied. Out of 443 persons examined, 382 were recorded as having normal vision, while the remainder failed to pass the tests.

WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES? Who knows?

On Monday, Mr and Mrs W. Yeager left for their annual holiday which will be spent with Mrs Yeager's sister at Hamilton, Ont.

Quite a little excitement was caused on Saturday when the two special C.N.R. trains bearing the Shermans home to the eastern States from their convention at the coast passed through here.

Save yourself money by turning to the advt. of the Town Council on page 5. Unless these are paid up as demanded the property owner is going to lose and lose heavily. Too! Think it over and profit thereby.

Mrs A. Wheaton left on Monday's train to spend a holiday with relatives in Boston, Mass.

Miss Hazel Binker left for Vancouver at the week end, where she is again taking up nursing duties.

A little paint on either the face or the barn works wonders. We don't care where you get that for your face but for your barn you cannot do better than Bapco Pure Paint from the Atlas yard, phone to Joe Welch at 57

The manner in which the buffalo are being handled during the branding operations speaks volumes for the park riders. Although the new pens and the "squeezers" are all new to the animals, they are very little excited and no accidents have happened to mar the proceedings. Harry Mabey is the official "marker" and is sure making a good job of it, too!

Crown Olive Soap; one of the best moderately-priced toilet soaps; Saturday special at Gerow's drug store—3 bars for 25¢

The youngsters who are members of the Band of Hope enjoyed their annual picnic on Friday last and report a good time.

It is being pointed out that those who wash their cars near the tennis courts, might at least have the courtesy to keep their vehicles far enough away from the courts so that the water will not run on to the newly formed playing ground.

A very pleasant time was spent by a party of young people last week when Mrs A. Watson entertained them at a picnic at Mett lake

We are sorry to learn that Mr W. Bowen is still confined to his bed with his sick attack. During his absence from business his son Ormond is in charge of the filling station, and all orders receive their usual prompt attention. According to latest reports we understand that Mr Bowen is likely to be kept in bed for at least another week.

It might be well to note that the services have been altered at the United church from heretofore. Morning service is now to be held every Sunday at 11 a.m. in addition to the evening worship at 7.30. The Sunday school will meet at 12 noon. On Sunday evening next the Rev. W. Lewis, of the Lord's Day alliance will preach in the evening.

Mr F. Fish is now putting the finishing touches to the roof of the memorial tower, and the big clocks are getting a try-out at the Cork jewelry store before being placed in their final resting place some thirty feet up in the tower.

The Board of Trade meeting which was supposed to have been held on Thursday last failed to materialise possibly on account of want of proper advertising. Something should be done in this regard however, as the matter of the main highway through town should now be taken up with the government, especially on the west side. The road to the park MUST be fixed this year, and the hospital matter seems to be something worth working upon. Let's get busy!

WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES? The Wainwright Dramatic club will explain at the theatre on June 25th
